ME WAS THEN LAYING TO, RE-PATRING A BROKEN SHAFT,

And Desired to Be Reported All Well. The Chairman of the Cunarder Steamship Company Says He Has No Anxiety Regarding the Vessel, Even Though He Should Not Hear from Her for Some

New York, Dec. 31 .- The news brought by the Galileo of the missing Umbria is most cheering. The captain says he steered so close to the Umbria as to be able to see the people on her lecks. She rode high out of the water, the smoke was coming from the funnels, and she signaled that she needed

The Galileo's captain says he believes the vessel's machinery was out of order and that Captain McKay had stopped in midocean to repair it. When signaled the Umbris was thirty-five miles south of the regular westbound route from Queenstown, and almost in the track of vessels bound out from New York to Southampton and German and French

She was 550 miles due east from Bosion, and 245 miles southeast of Halifax. This was on Christmas day. As she can make 500 miles a day, it seems strange that no vessel going out of neighboring ports during the last five days has not met her if she is still above water.

Passengers and Value. The Umbria and her cargo is roughly estimated at $7,500,000. She is insured for about $5,000,000. She carries 250 first and second cobin passengers, be-ides a crew of nearly 200 and a large number of steerage passengers, possibly 100 in all.

Reported All Well. NEW YORK, Dec. 31 .- Captain Duck, of the steamer Manhassett, which ardved from Bristol Friday morning, reported that on Dec. 26, at 1:30 p. m., in $2:50 latitude and 57:45 longitude, he spoke the Cunarder Umbria, laying to, with three sea anchors out, repairing a broken shaft. They said they expected to finish the repairs the next day and wished to be reported all well.

The Dutch tank steam er Ocean, Capain Caspur, from Amsterdam, which arrived Friday morning reports that on Dec. 26 at noon, in latitude 42:39, longinde 57:53, passed a steamer, which was hove to, apparently Cunard steamer Umbria. It was blowing a serious gale from the west at the time. The steamr showed no flags of distress.

A Number of Kentuckians Met to Settle It-Three Wounded. RICHMOND, Ky., Dec. 31.—Whisky and blood flowed freely at Waco, in the eastern part of this county Wednesday when Reub Puckett and Hiram Fields met for a settlement of differences. A number of desperadoes took part in the fight, and when it ended three men were found seriously wounded. Puckett shot Fields and two others who were engaged in the fight. He is a member of the notorious Puckett gang, who have been terrors to the citizens of Estill county for years, being closely re-lated to Bill Puckett, who was hanged at Irvine last March for murder. All will be arrested.
